Retro Muscle: Motocrew's GPZ900R is the business. View Full Size. There's a lot to be said for a good old-fashioned muscle bike. And in the 1980s, the Kawasaki GPZ900R was the benchmark. It didn't have any of the nanny state electronics we're used to today, but the raucous, liquid-cooled DOHC four punched out 113 solid horses—and propelled the GPZ to 150 mph or more.

Questions about 1986 Kawasaki Ninja GPZ900R. So I may have just found a bike that I've always wanted. Maybe a couple years newer, but basically Maverick's bike in Top Gun. I have a 2000 GSXR 600, a few mods, but has been run pretty hard by the previous owner. Has a few cosmetic issues, but still a bike that runs well.
