In The Real Life of Sebastian Knight, Nabokov blurs the lines between reality and fiction. Though the novel is supposed to take place in a reality identical to physical reality, Nabokov uses fiction-like coincidences and even intrusions of fictional characters to blend the world of the narrator and that of Sebastian Knight ' s novels. A good example of Nabokov's use of this technique is the doubling of Knight's fictional character, Mr. Siller, and the character who meets and helps V. on the ...
